LOUIS H. MYERS,

The Bulletin.

THE WAY TO GET MARRIED. One fine morning in automa, Linval was taking a walk in the Tuileries at Paris, and found an open billet containing the following lines: If the person who finds this paper is disposed to do a benevolent action he is requested to inquire at No. 346 Rue Sain-tage, for Engenie de Mirande. Such as may not be inclined to assist an unfortuhate mother are entrented, at least, not to hinder others, and to throw the billet again where they found it. Linval, the best dancer in Paris, was just humming a new tune; he picked up the paper, and after reading it, whisked it up into the air with his cane and pursued his walk. The next person who noticed it was an elderly man, simply dressed, who was hurrying to a public office in which he had a place; because he was already late. He contrived, nevertheless, to spare so much timeras was necessary to read the billet; which, however, shrugging up his should-ers and raising his eyes to beaven, as much as to say, "That is no concern of mine," he carefully replaced it in its former situation. He was followed by a former-general; one of these moderate people who are satisfied if they can clear 3,000 livres a day; who elated by their wealth, give them-elves airs of much consequence, and of whom La Bruyers says they been load and spit far. At first he kicked the billet along with his foot, but his curiosity being excited, he took it up, threw his eyes over it with a scoramile, and amused himself in tearing it to phases, at the same time neutering can impading impa-ture. The next morning a similar billet lay on the same spot. The first person who read it took down the address in book and replaced the paper. Next came a young couple who had not long been a young couple who had not long to be a young it took down the address in his pocketwho expected in about three months to become for the first time in her life, a mother, said to her husband, "let us go my dear; what we can offer is little, to be sure; but in many cases a little may save the unfortunate from despair-come, let us go! They accordingly went. After they had found the specified number in the Rue Saintage, they learned that the house was inhabited by an old physician, who had retired from practice and was thought to be rich, and had only one daughter, distinguished for her understanding and They ascended a handsome staircase, and were tabered into an apartment on the first floor, which was furnished, not magnificently, but with taste. They enquired for Eugenie de Mirande, and a lady, oung, elegant, and accomplished, made her appearance. She requested her visit-ers to step inton saloon that seemed to be the haunt of the Muses. Books, drawings, and musical instruments were intermingled, and formed by no means an unpleasant contrast with the newiness, The young couple could not conceive where persons in need of assistance were to be ought in such a habitation. "I fear madam, said Julia, that we are wrong. We found a billet with your direction in the Tuileries, and expected to meet a person to whom we might have afforded some relief; but all that we see here seems rather to indicate opplience than to call for the exercise of benevolence."

Eargetic replied, with some embarrate-ment, that she was merely the interpreter of every unfortunate female, who from a relie of pride, wished to remain unknown but was deserving of compassion. Julia expressed a wish to become acquainted with this lady. "I am no stranger to distress, "said she; before me she would have no occasion to blush." Eagenie, to gratify her in this particular, observed that misbetune had made her protege so shy and mistrustful, that it was extremely difficult to gain her confidence.

"Has she any children?" asked Julia. "Three; and her husband, whose labors procured a scanty substance for his family, just dead, after a long and painful ill-

"I shall myself soon be a mother," said Julia, cand the fate of the little unfortunates affects me the more deeply. I would gladly take one of them, but my own infant will demand all my care. However permit me to send you a packet of little articles for the children, for I cannot suppose that his family, protected as it is by you, can be in want of the absolute necessarles of life. Eugenie cordially thanked her in the name of the unknown lady, promised to take care of her parents, and noted down

Julia's name and address. No sooner had Julia and her husband retired than the same object brought a young man to the house.

"I beg your parden, madam," said he to Eugenie: "it is not you that I want, but Eugenie de Miranda."

"I am not that person." The young man was no less staggered than Julia had been, and received the same explanation. Affected by the story, he offered his assistance.

I am not rich, said he, but a bachelor may, with a little frugality, always put by a little for the relief the distressed. replied Eugenie, "there are cases in which money cannot afford relief. There are other ways in which the interference of the benevolent may prove inmate "Of what nature is the interference that your friend stands in need of? Speak out. On your recommendation I will chesefully undertake whatever lies in my

"Then excuse a rade question, on account of the motive which prompts it. Are your connections such that you can obtain access to the minister?"

"No, madam! My father possesses a small estimate in the neighborhood of Paris, the value of which has been doubled by his industry; but he never appeared in the anti-chamber of the great, and God be thanked! I shall share with five beloved brothers and sisters the patrimony left by my father, and hope that the minister will never hear my name; unless, indeed, your friend stands in need of an advocate to plead her cause. In that case I am ready; only let me know in what way I can serve her."

"It was found necessary," replied Eugene, to destroy some grounds which my friend's husband have planted and laid out at great expense, because the rafety of our army required it. It is an indemnity

"And is any patronage required for for the loss she solicited."

"Not exactly, for the claim is just. But you know how often such matters are pro-tracted in the public offices, and even wholly forgotten. It would therefore be an essential point to accelerate the affair, The best way would be, to address the minister!

the difficulty.

Here a pause succeeded.
"Might I request that favor of you?" resumed Eugenie, with a look of modest entreaty.

"I will do it with pleasure, and should have offered at first, had I been aware of the circumstances.

I don't doubt it," said Eugenie. But I am not yet sufficiently acquainted with this matter."

You shall know everything!" Here her father entered the room; she quickly informed him of the object of the visit, and, on receiving a sign from her, the old man asked the stranger to dinner any day that might be convenient. The day was appointed, and Dumont (such was the name of the visitor) was punctual in his attendance to receive the promised instructions. The dinner was cheerful and free from restraint. The party conversed on all kinds of subjects, except the business which brought them together. The stranger thought Eugenie, very accomplished very sociable, and, at last, too, very handsome. After dinner she detailed all the particulars of the case which he had undertaken. He listened to it with the utmost attention, and promised in two days to produce the memorial, and was as good as his word. It was concise, clear and energetic. "It is written with much warmth," said she to herself, with great emphasis. Were I the minister, you should be sure to gain your point!"

Dumont blushed and stammered some memorial to him in person. Dumont went sway, and after an interval of eight days, during which he had moved heaven and earth to accomplish his purpose, he exultingly entered Eugenie's

"To-morrow, he said; "your friend will be admitted. Let her only produce this note, and every door will be thrown open Eugenie thanked him with ardor.

"But," said she; "a female, naturally timid and depressed by misfortune, would scarcely be able to present herself to advantage, if she were to appear unattended! Could you be prevailed upon to be her conductor

This last favor was a sacrifice for Dumont, but he was by this time incapable of refusing Eugenie anything. It is likewise possible that he might be stimulated by ome degree of curiosity to become acquainted with the mysterious incognita. He promised to come the following day to be introduced to Engenie's friend. The night before the remarkable day, Eugenie made the following reflections:

This young man evidently possesses a olid character and good heart. His figure is not amiss. At first, indeed, he seemed not to take particular notice of me, but has made ample amends for his musttention. As for my father, has he not told me a hundred times that this was my affair, he can have no objection? From all the information that I have obtained the ng man's account of himself is strictly true in every respect; but that was manifest enough at the first look. The frankness fidence-1 like his candor, but does he me! Perhaps his heart is already

"Not" replied Eugenie, with some emotion. Well then, I'll wait."

He took a chair and seated himself beside her, at the breakfast table. They began to speak on various topies, but somehow or other, the conversation was repeatedly broke off-long pauses, filled up with eloquent looks, alone intervened-Dumont colored—he was sensible of it, and this consciousness would have confounded him had not Eugenie blushed too. This flattered his heart and gave him courage.

"I cannot help blessing the accident, he at length began, "to which I am indebted for your acquaintance.

Eugenie's downcast eyes were fixed on her heaving bosom.

Your kind behavior, sir," said she, "has made a deep impression on me, and will never be effaced from my remembrance?" His eyes were now oast down in their turn, and a painful silence ensued. At length Dumont formed a heroic resolu-

"I know not whether I do right," said he, "but in truth I can no longer disguise my feelings, which you must, I dare say, long since have guessed."

She had, in reality, long discovered them, but in such cases women never have compassion enough to shorten a poor fel-low's embarrassment; it is absolutely necessary to speak out in plain terms; thus Dumont, also, was at length obliged to pronounce distinctly the word Love. No sooner was this barrier, guarded by shame and timidity, broken down, than the conversation proceeded in its usual course. Inquiries were made respecting each other a taste, way of thinking, family connections, and so fourth; and answers returned with such loquacious confidence, in undisguised sincerity, till at length Dumont recollected that the stranger was

CURE OF AGUE AND F

Chills and Fever.

THE proprietor of this celebrated medicine justify claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the safe, covered to the public for the safe, covered to the public for the safe, covered to the control of the truth of the assertion, that in no case whatever will it fail to cure, if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two nifer the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long standing cases. Usually, this medicine will not require any aid to keep the lowels in good order; should the patient, however, require a cathactic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of Bull's Vegetable Family Pilips will be sufficient.

To My United States and World wide Renders:

HAVE received many testimonials from professional and medical men, as my almanacand various publications have shown, all of which are genuine. The following, from a highly educated and popular physician in Georgia, is certainly one of the most sensible communications. I have ever received. Dr. Clement knows exactly what he speaks of, and his testimony deserves to be written in letters of gold. Hear what the Doctor says of Bull's Worm bestroyer:

Villanow, Warker County, Ga., June 29, 1866.

Dr. Joan Real—Dear Sr. I have reconly given your "Worm Destroyer" several trials, and find it wonderfully efficacious. It has not feded in a single instance to have the wished-for effect. I am doing a pretty large county practice, and have daily use for some article of the kind. I are free to confess that I know of no remedy necommented by the ablest authorities that is no certain and speedy in its effects. On the contrary, they are uncertain in the extreme. My object in enting you is to find out upon what terms I can get upon easy terms, I shall use a great deal of it is an aware that the use of such articles is contrary to the teachings and practice of a great majority of the regular line discarding a remedy which we know to be sufficient, simply because we may be appeared its command of its combination. For my part, I shall make it a rule to use all and every means to allow that suffering humanity which I may be able to command—not heartaing because when the effects fired, and secured the sole right to secure that knowledge.
